Quantitative outcomes :

Qualitative outcomes:

- IWRM in Central Asia, Legislative acts;
- TC is political institution –”round table” consensus on most critical issues among countries and sectors, governmental and nongovernmental organizations;
- acceptance of “Water-Gender- Increase of agricultural productivity” relationship.

Received high assessment of CIDA evaluation mission

Changes in regional orientation of Canada requires search for other funding sources.

TC support is necessary to ensure regional implementation of IWRM

Main office:

- coordination of regional training activities;
- preparation and dissemination of training materials;
- development of new courses and training for trainers.

Branches:

- “grass-root” level activities;
- consulting services;
- education of farmers and water users.

Why is it necessary?

- Training demand is up to 2000 professionals per year;
- Maintain mutual understanding and water management cooperation among generations of professionals at all levels;
- Development and maintenance of consulting services in all regional countries to increase water and land productivity.

Prospective projects

- UNESCO IHE; US State Department;
- Water and Governance – UNDP;
- Gender and Water – CIDA;
- Project Management – CIDA;
- Water and Education – OSCE;
- Water and Land Productivity – EU FP-6;
- WUA – projects of ADB and World Bank.
